Jiminy Cricket has a story to tell...

Pinocchio says...

...about a silly little puppet named Pinocchio!

Once upon a time...

...Jiminy Cricket wandered into a little toy shop.

The woodcarver, Geppetto, was making a puppet.

The puppet's name was Pinocchio.

Jiminy Cricket decided to stay in the toy shop.

That night, Geppetto wished that Pinocchio would become a real boy.

The Blue Fairy appeared!
She told Pinocchio to be a good puppet.

"I can move! I can talk!" said Pinocchio.

If he proved himself brave, truthful, and unselfish...

...he could become a real boy!

The Blue Fairy asked Jiminy to be Pinocchio's conscience.

"Always let your conscience be your guide," she said.

Pinocchio was very excited!

“I’ll be a good boy!” he thought.

Pinocchio and Jiminy met Figaro, the cat.

Howdy!

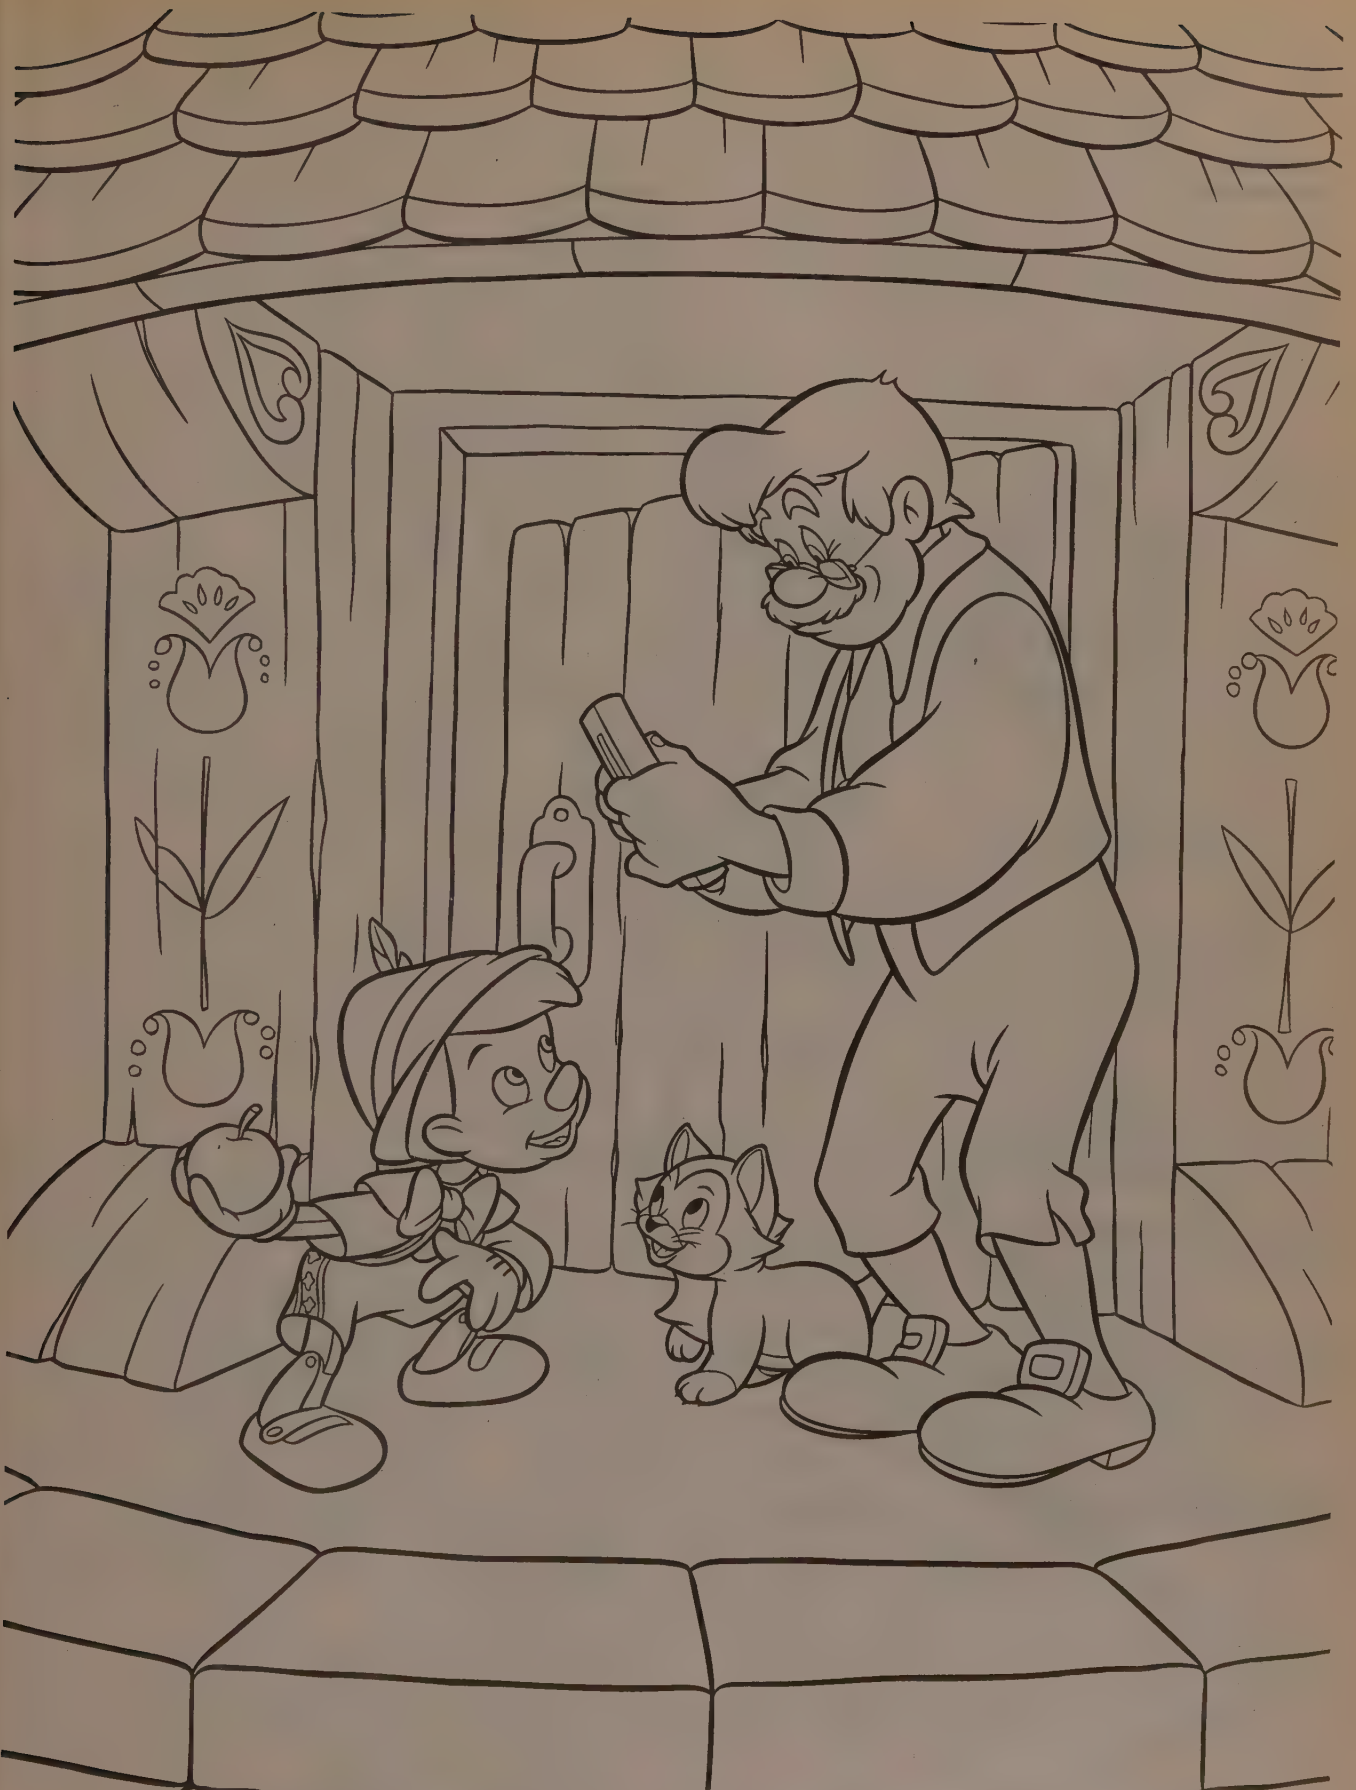

They met Cleo, the goldfish.

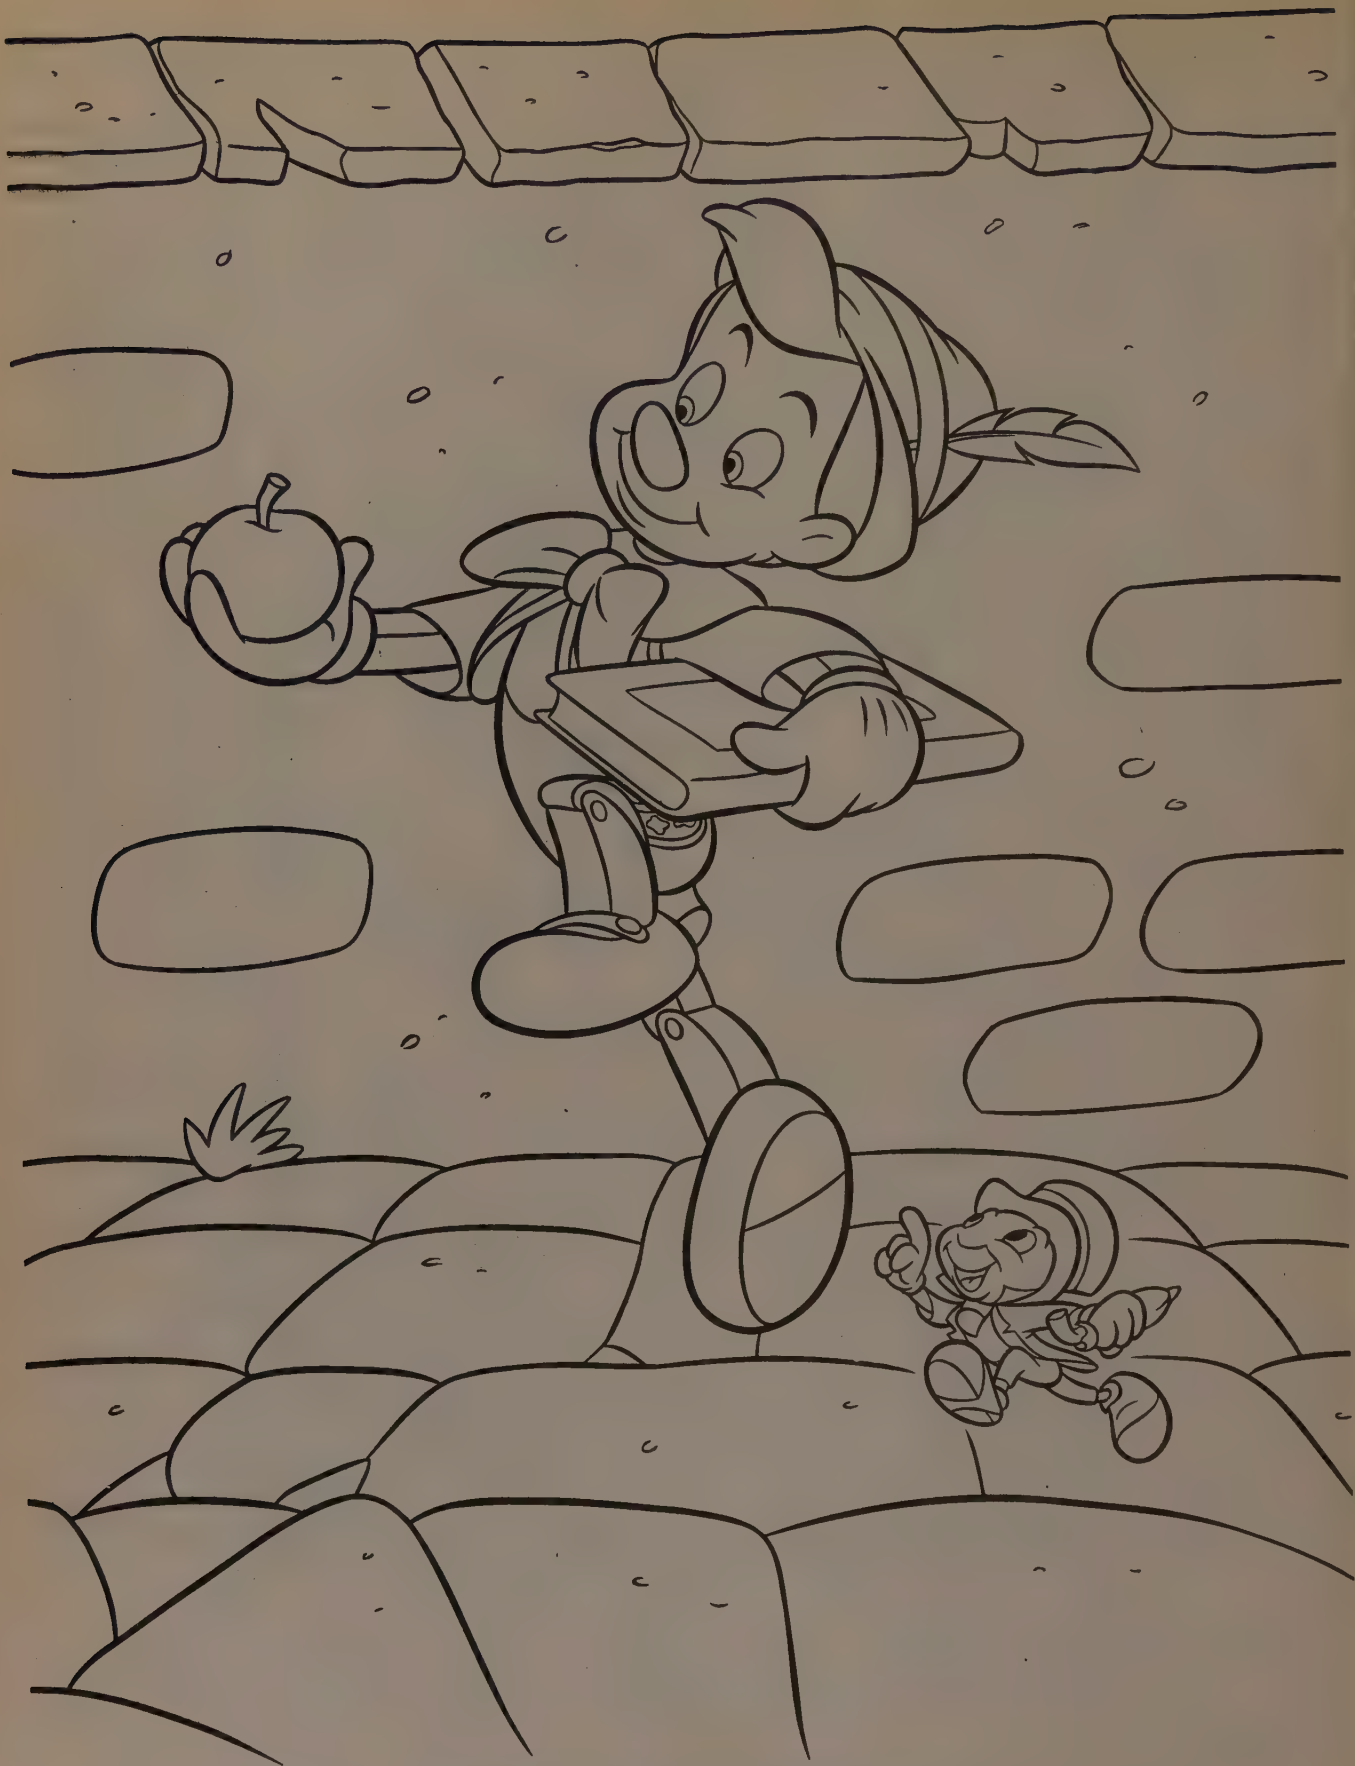

Howdy to you, too, ma'am!

And they met Geppetto! How happy Geppetto was!

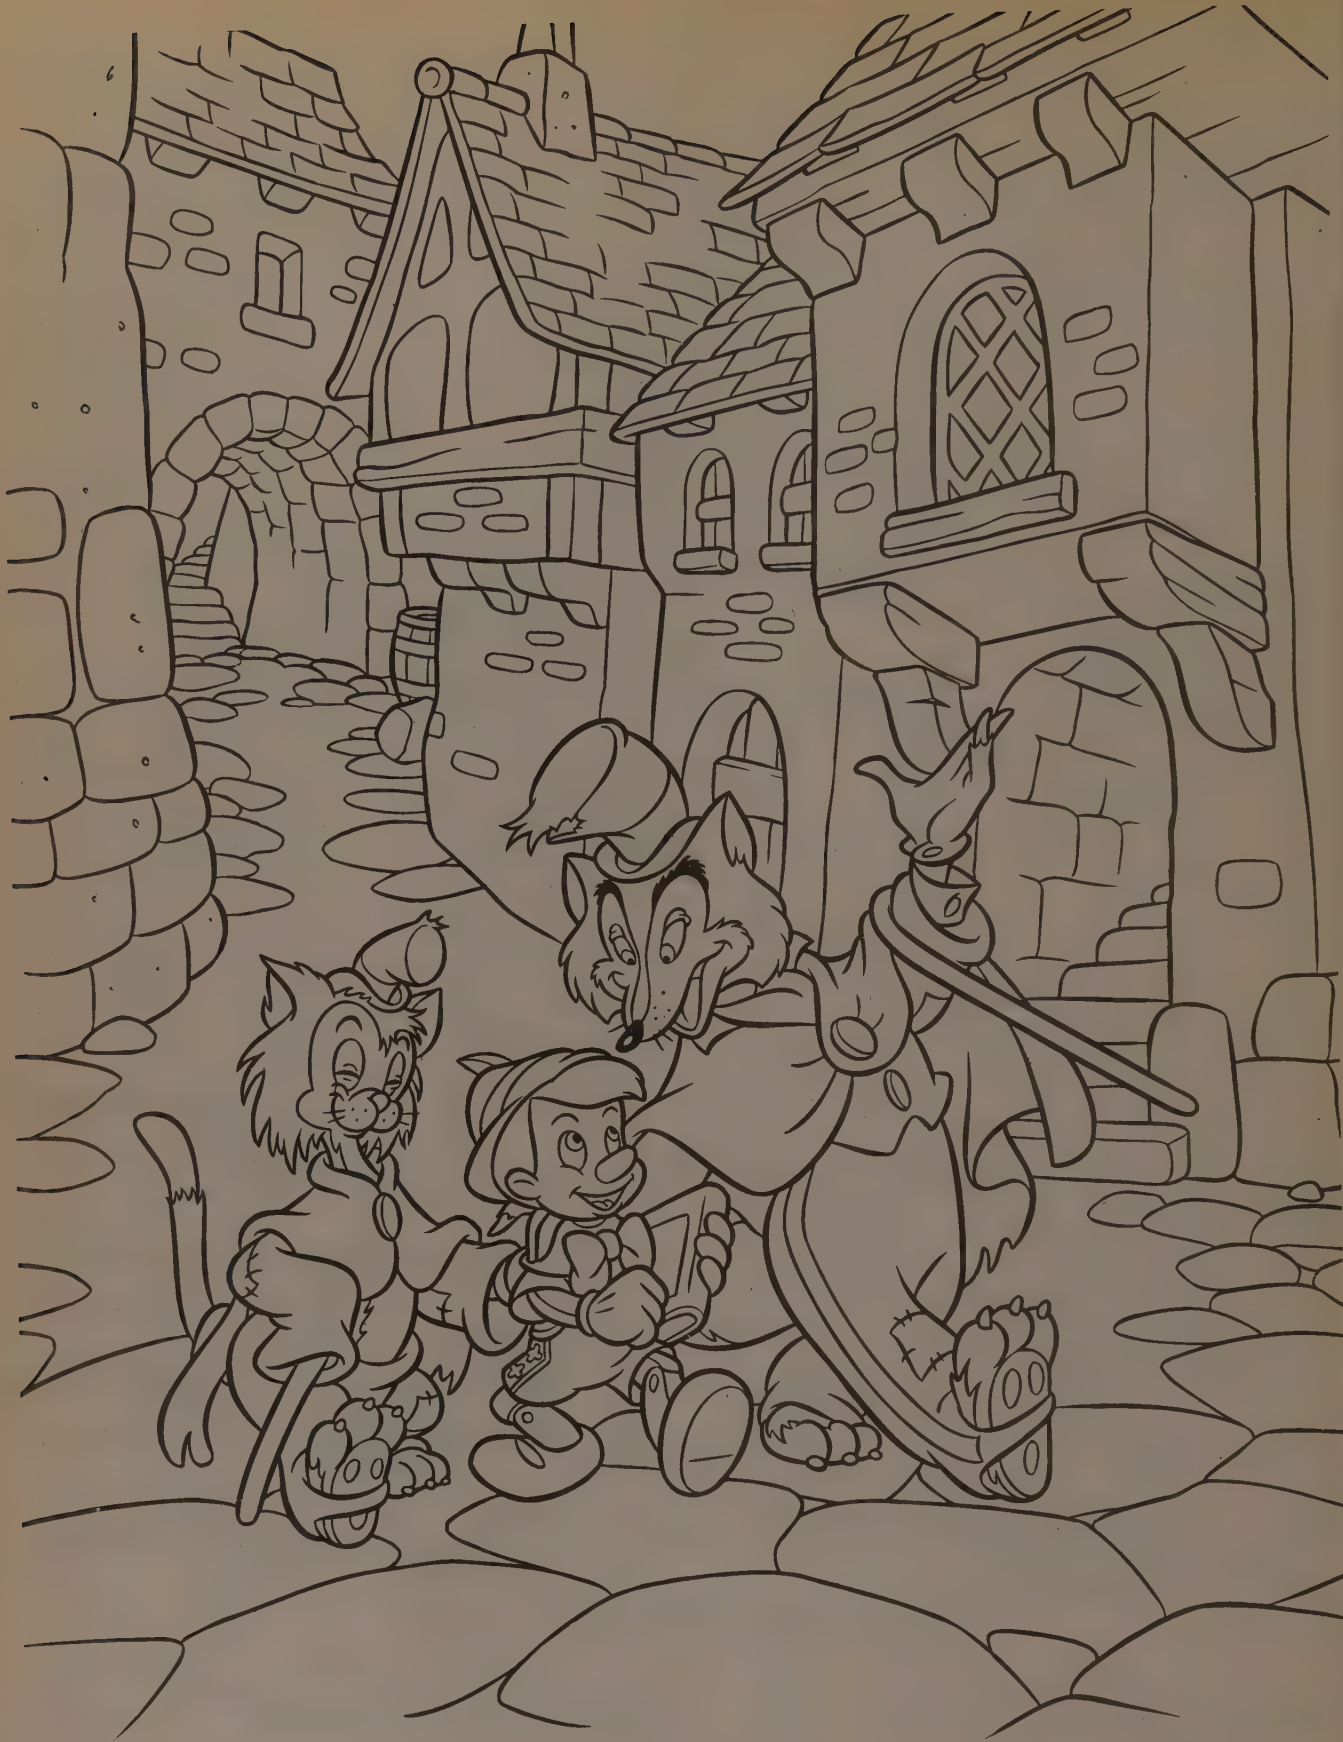

The next day, Geppetto sent his little boy off to school.

Jiminy tagged along—to teach him right from wrong.

“Look!” said a villain named Honest John to his friend Gideon. “A live puppet without strings!”

Honest John told Pinocchio he could make LOTS of money being in a puppet show.

The villains sold Pinocchio to Stromboli the puppet master.

"I got no strings on me!" sang Pinocchio.

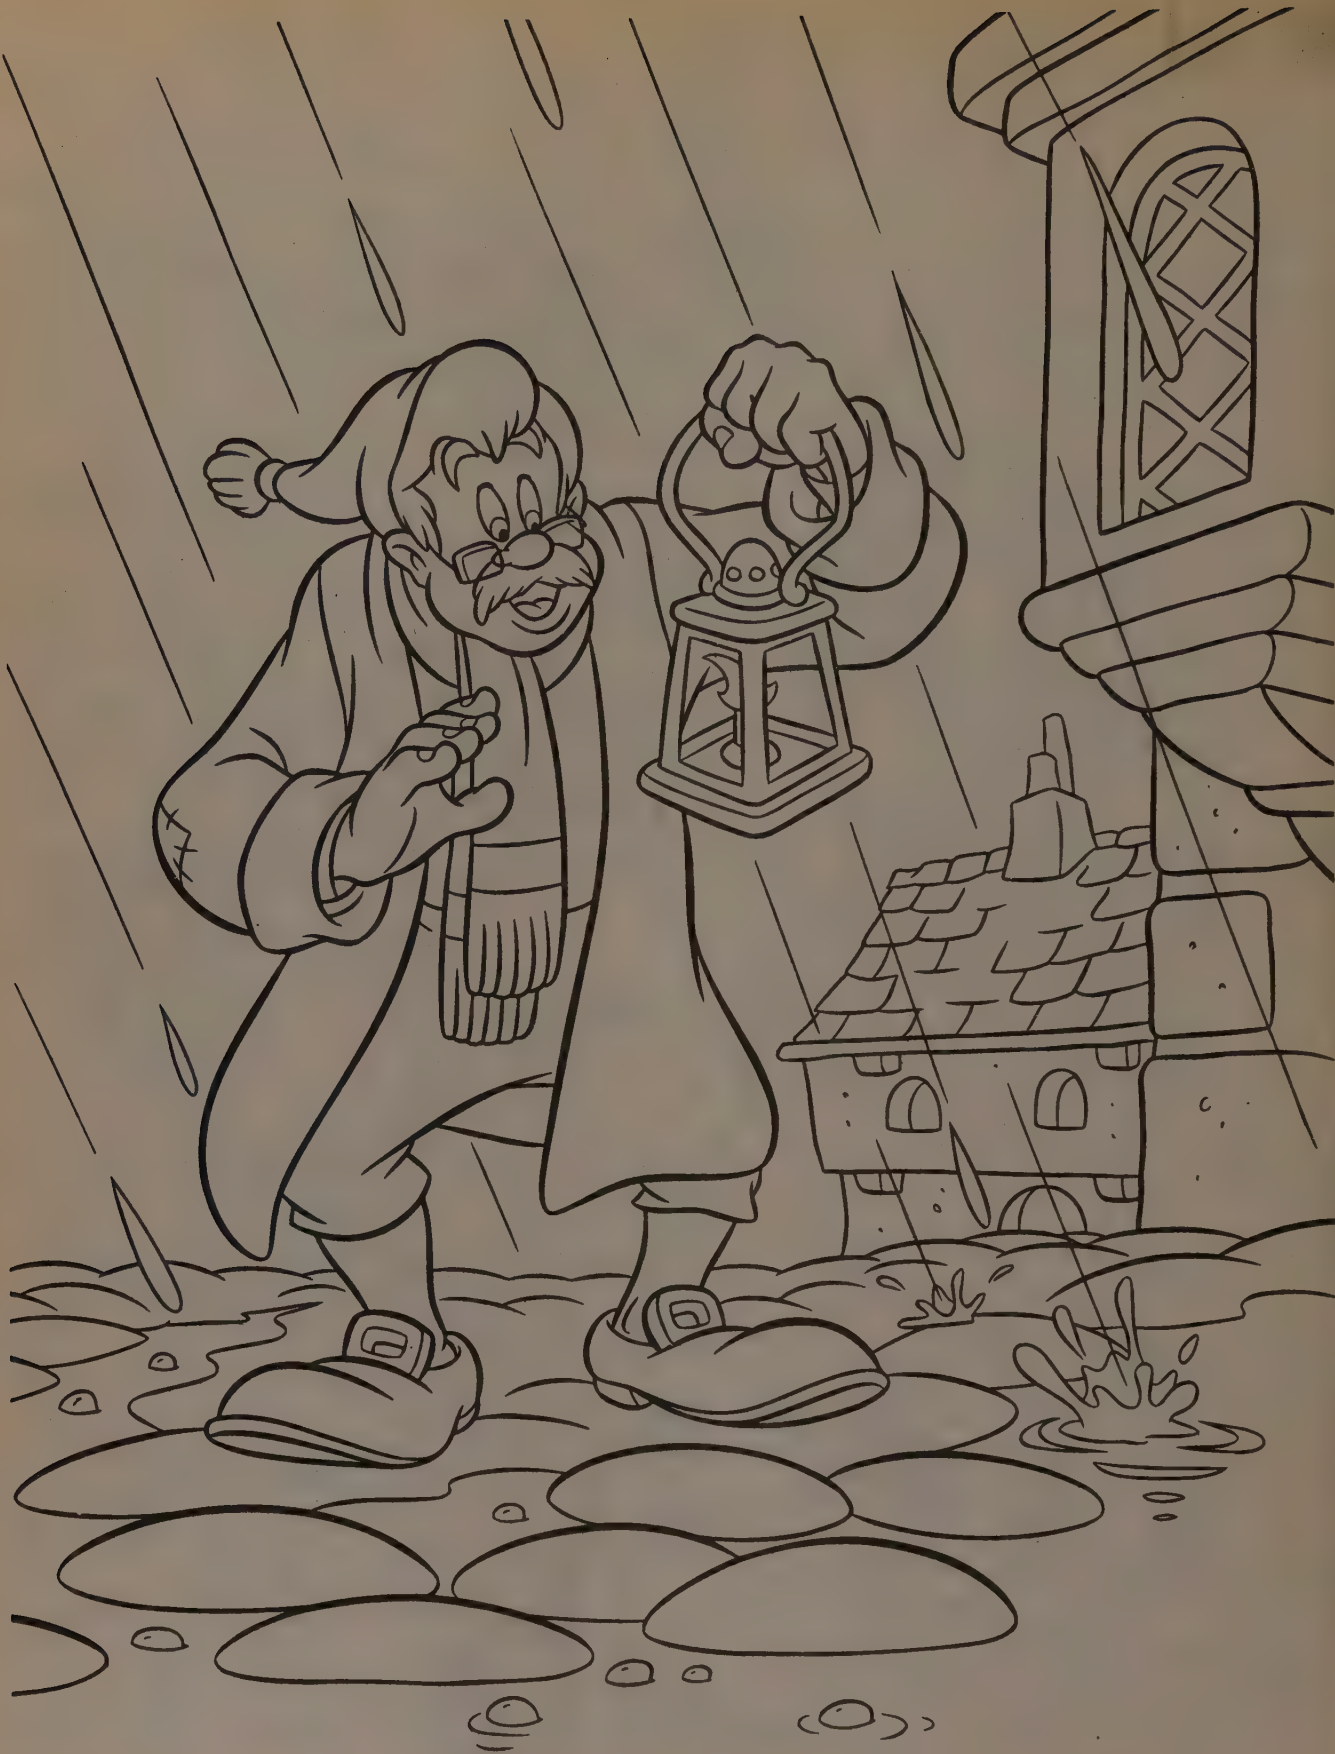

Pinocchio was the star of the show!

But when Pinocchio asked Stromboli when he could go home to his father...

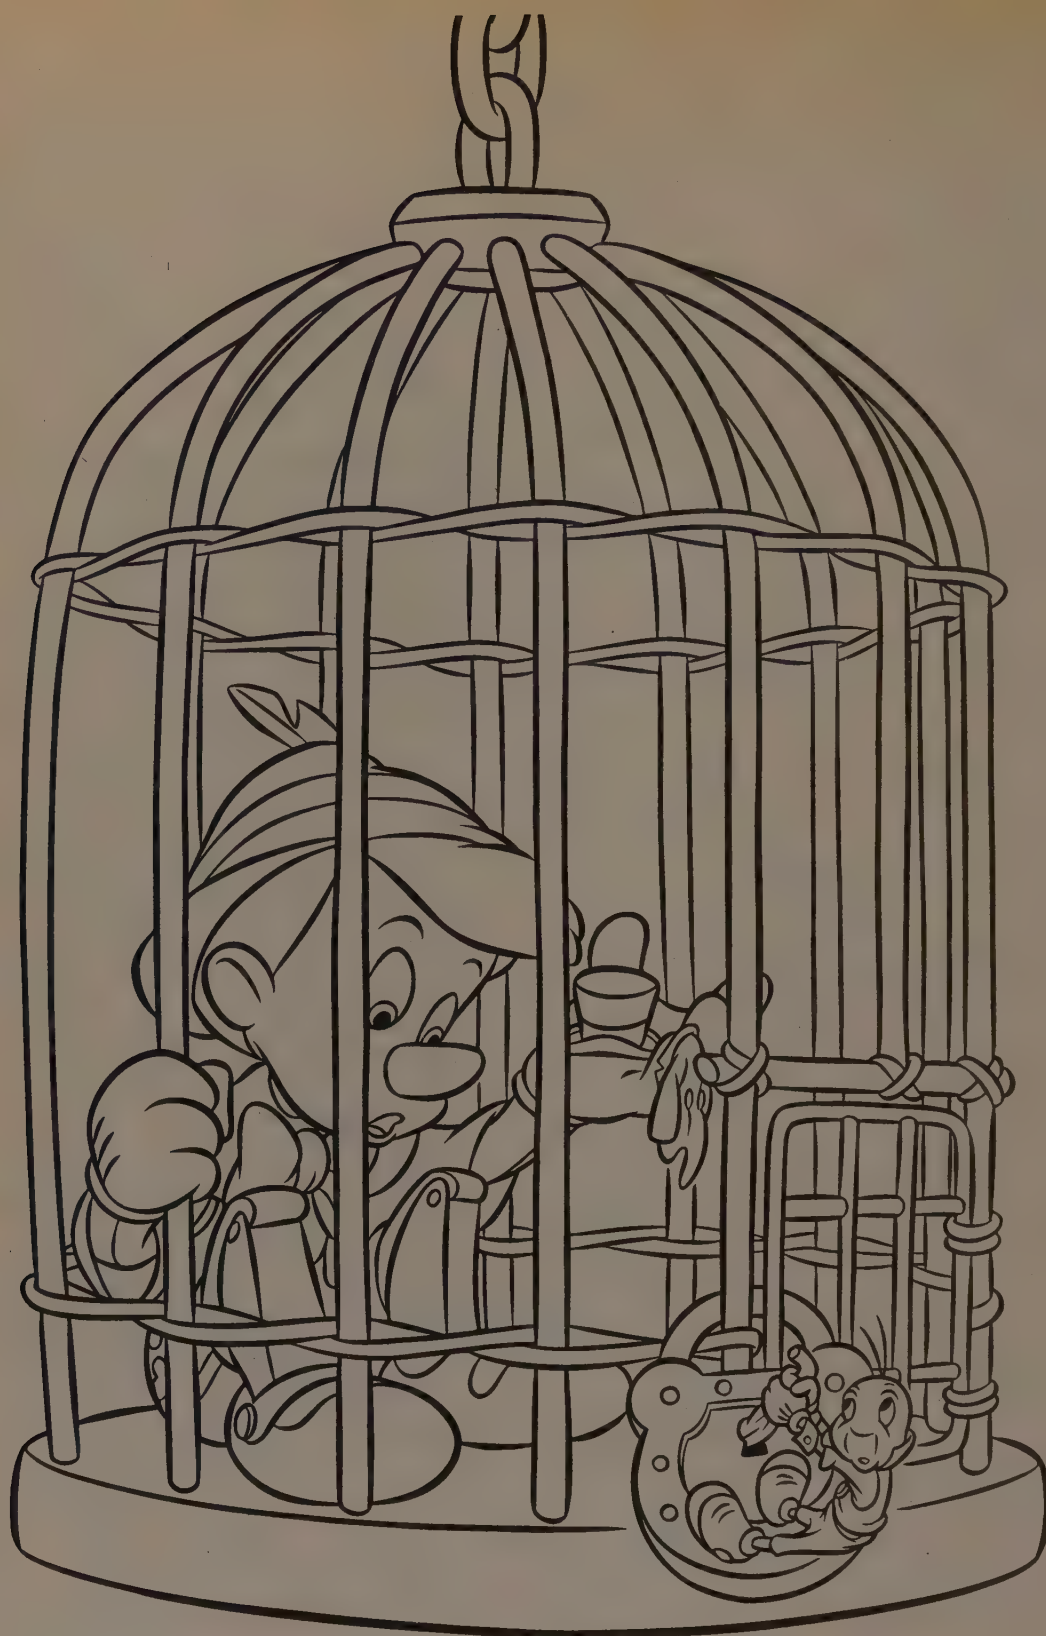

...Stromboli locked him in a cage!

Back home, Geppetto went looking for his missing boy.

Jiminy Cricket went looking, too.
He found Stromboli's wagon.

But Jiminy could not unlock the lock.

Then the Blue Fairy appeared!
“Pinocchio, why didn’t you go to school?” she asked.

Pinocchio decided to tell a lie.

“Two big monsters with big green eyes...” he started.

Oh, my! His nose grew longer!
“Well, I... they tied me in a big sack,” Pinocchio went on.

The more Pinocchio lied, the longer his nose grew!

A lie keeps growing until it's as plain as the nose on your face!

"I'll never lie again," Pinocchio promised.
The Blue Fairy fixed his nose and set him free.

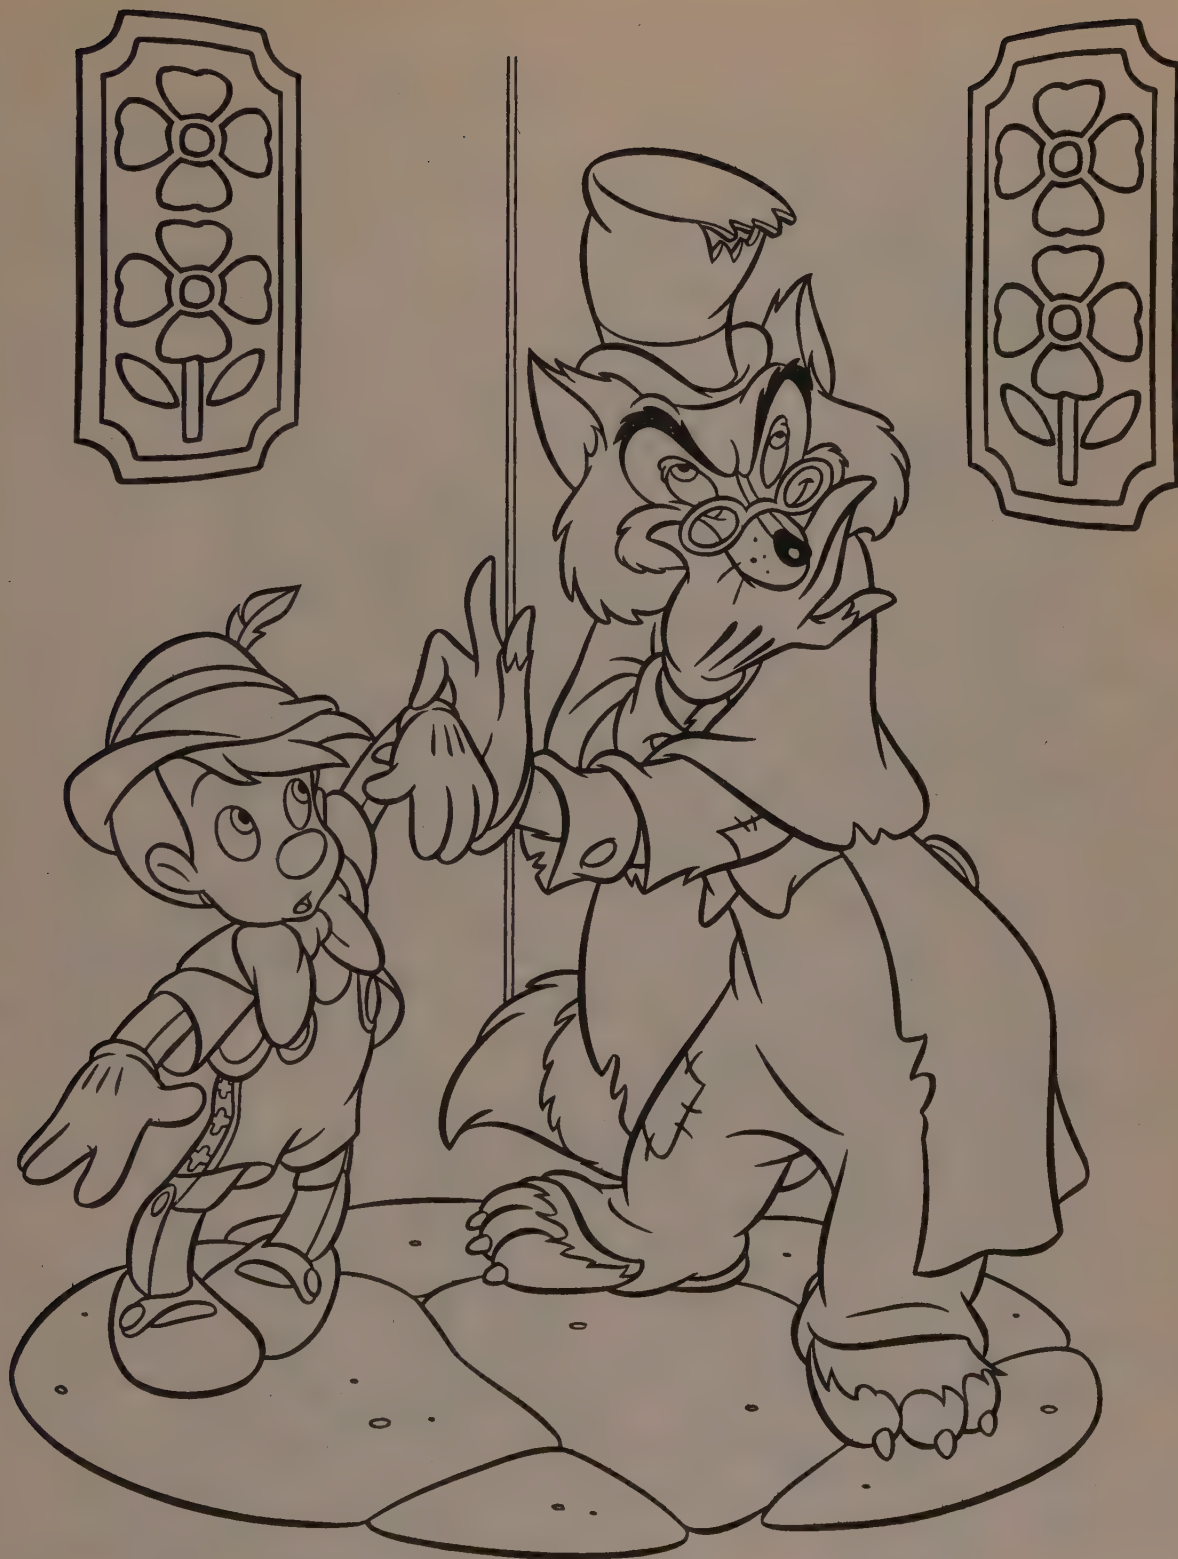

Pinocchio said he'd be a good boy from now on.

He would go to school and learn right from wrong!

But those awful villains were planning their next move.

Honest John convinced Pinocchio to go to Pleasure Island—to play all day!

The villains sold Pinocchio again—this time to a coachman with a coach full of noisy boys.

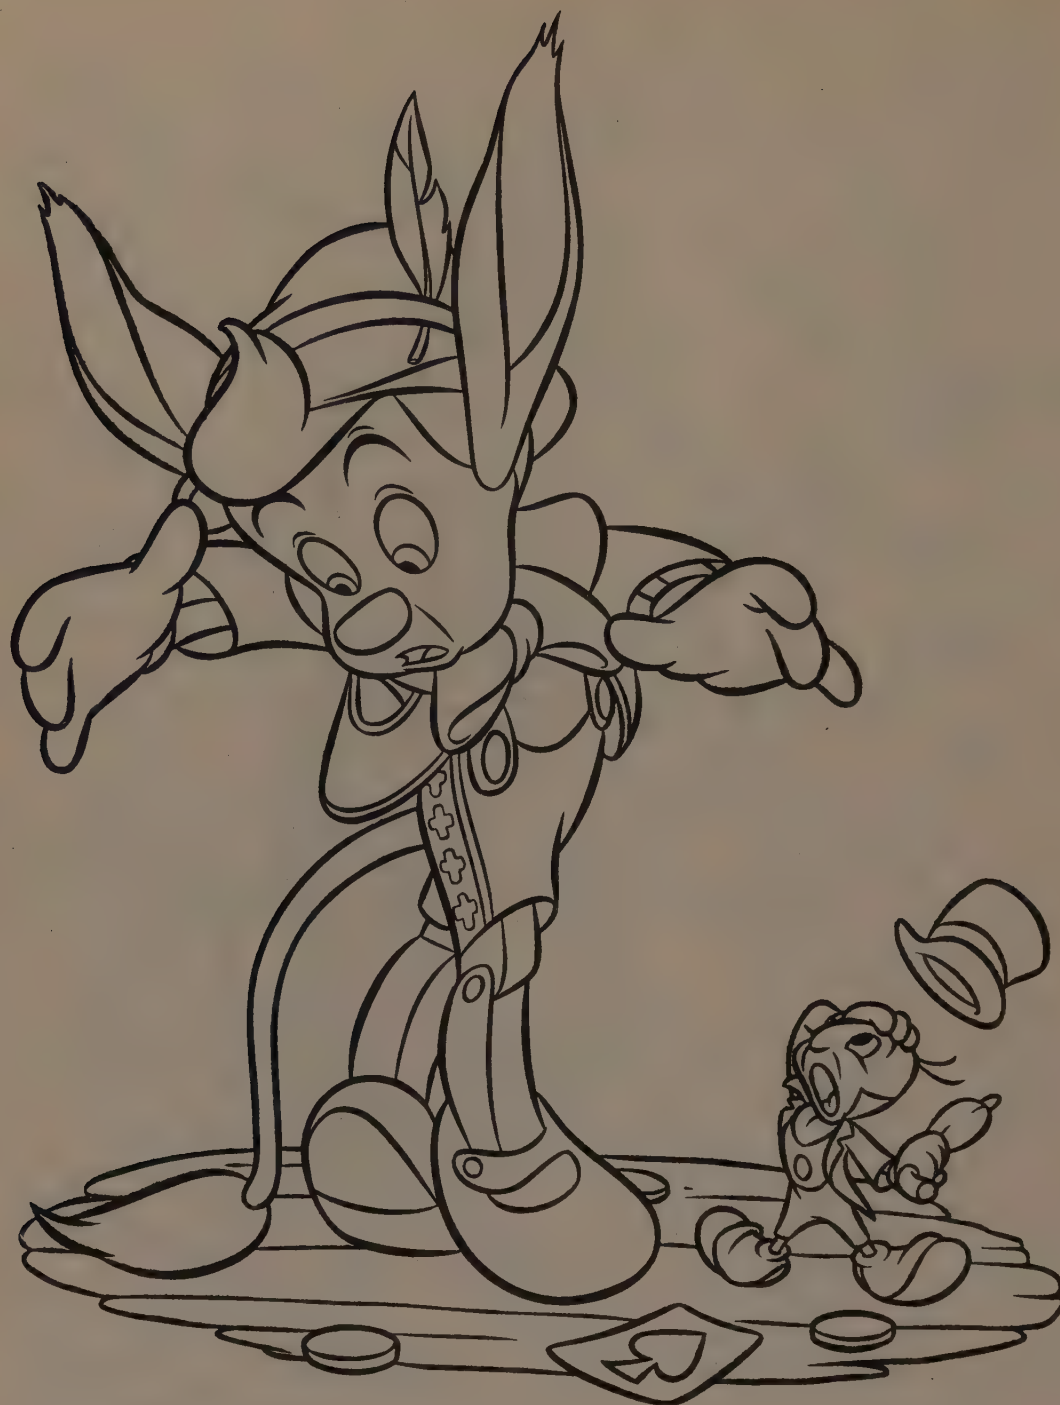

On Pleasure Island, Pinocchio met Lampwick, a very naughty boy!

Jiminy warned Pinocchio that something bad would happen!

Suddenly, Lampwick turned into a donkey!

Oh, no! Pinocchio grew ears and a tail!
Jiminy got Pinocchio off that island—quick!

Back home, they found a note. Geppetto had gone looking for Pinocchio—and had been swallowed by a whale!

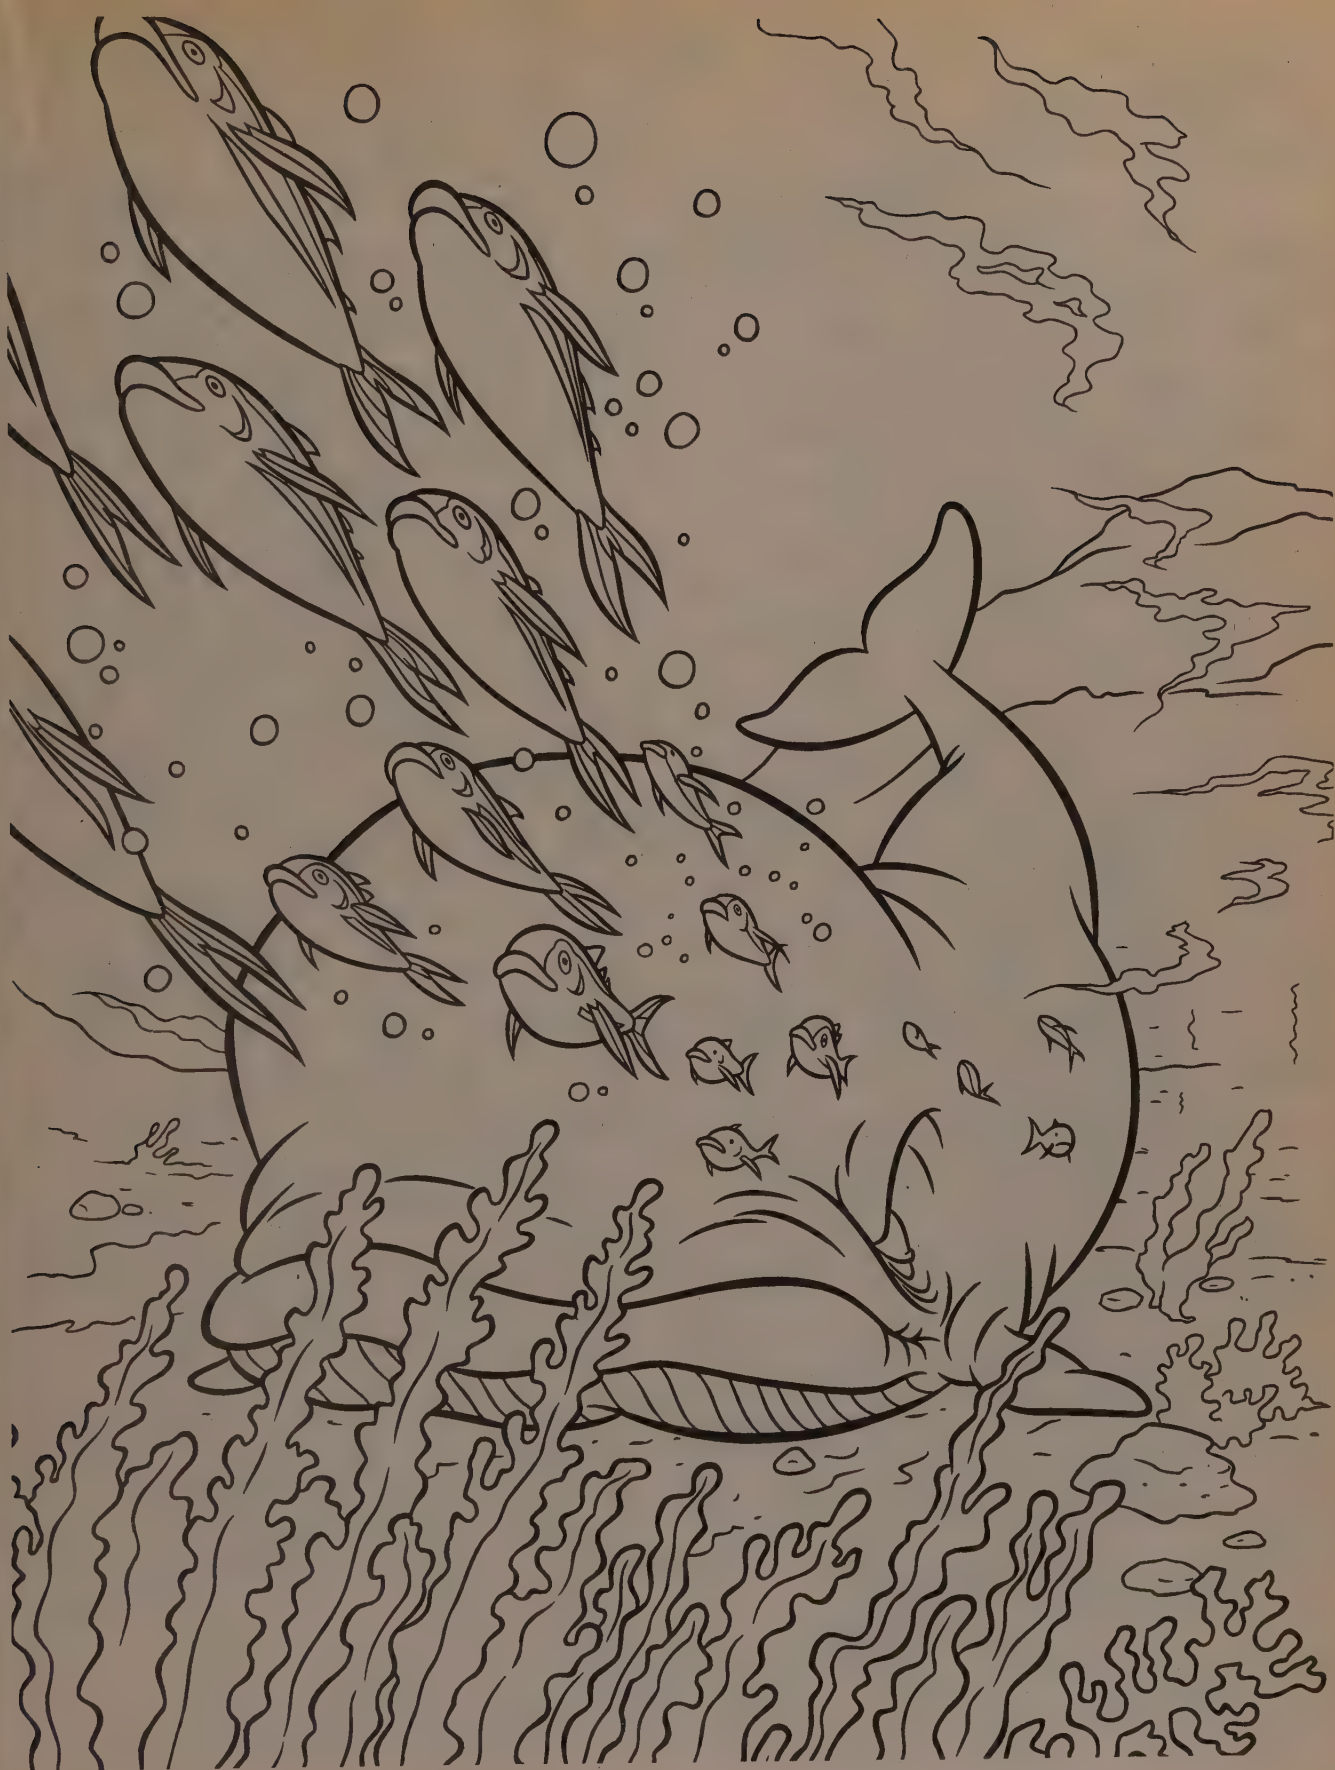

Pinocchio bravely decided to find his father.
He and Jiminy jumped into the sea!

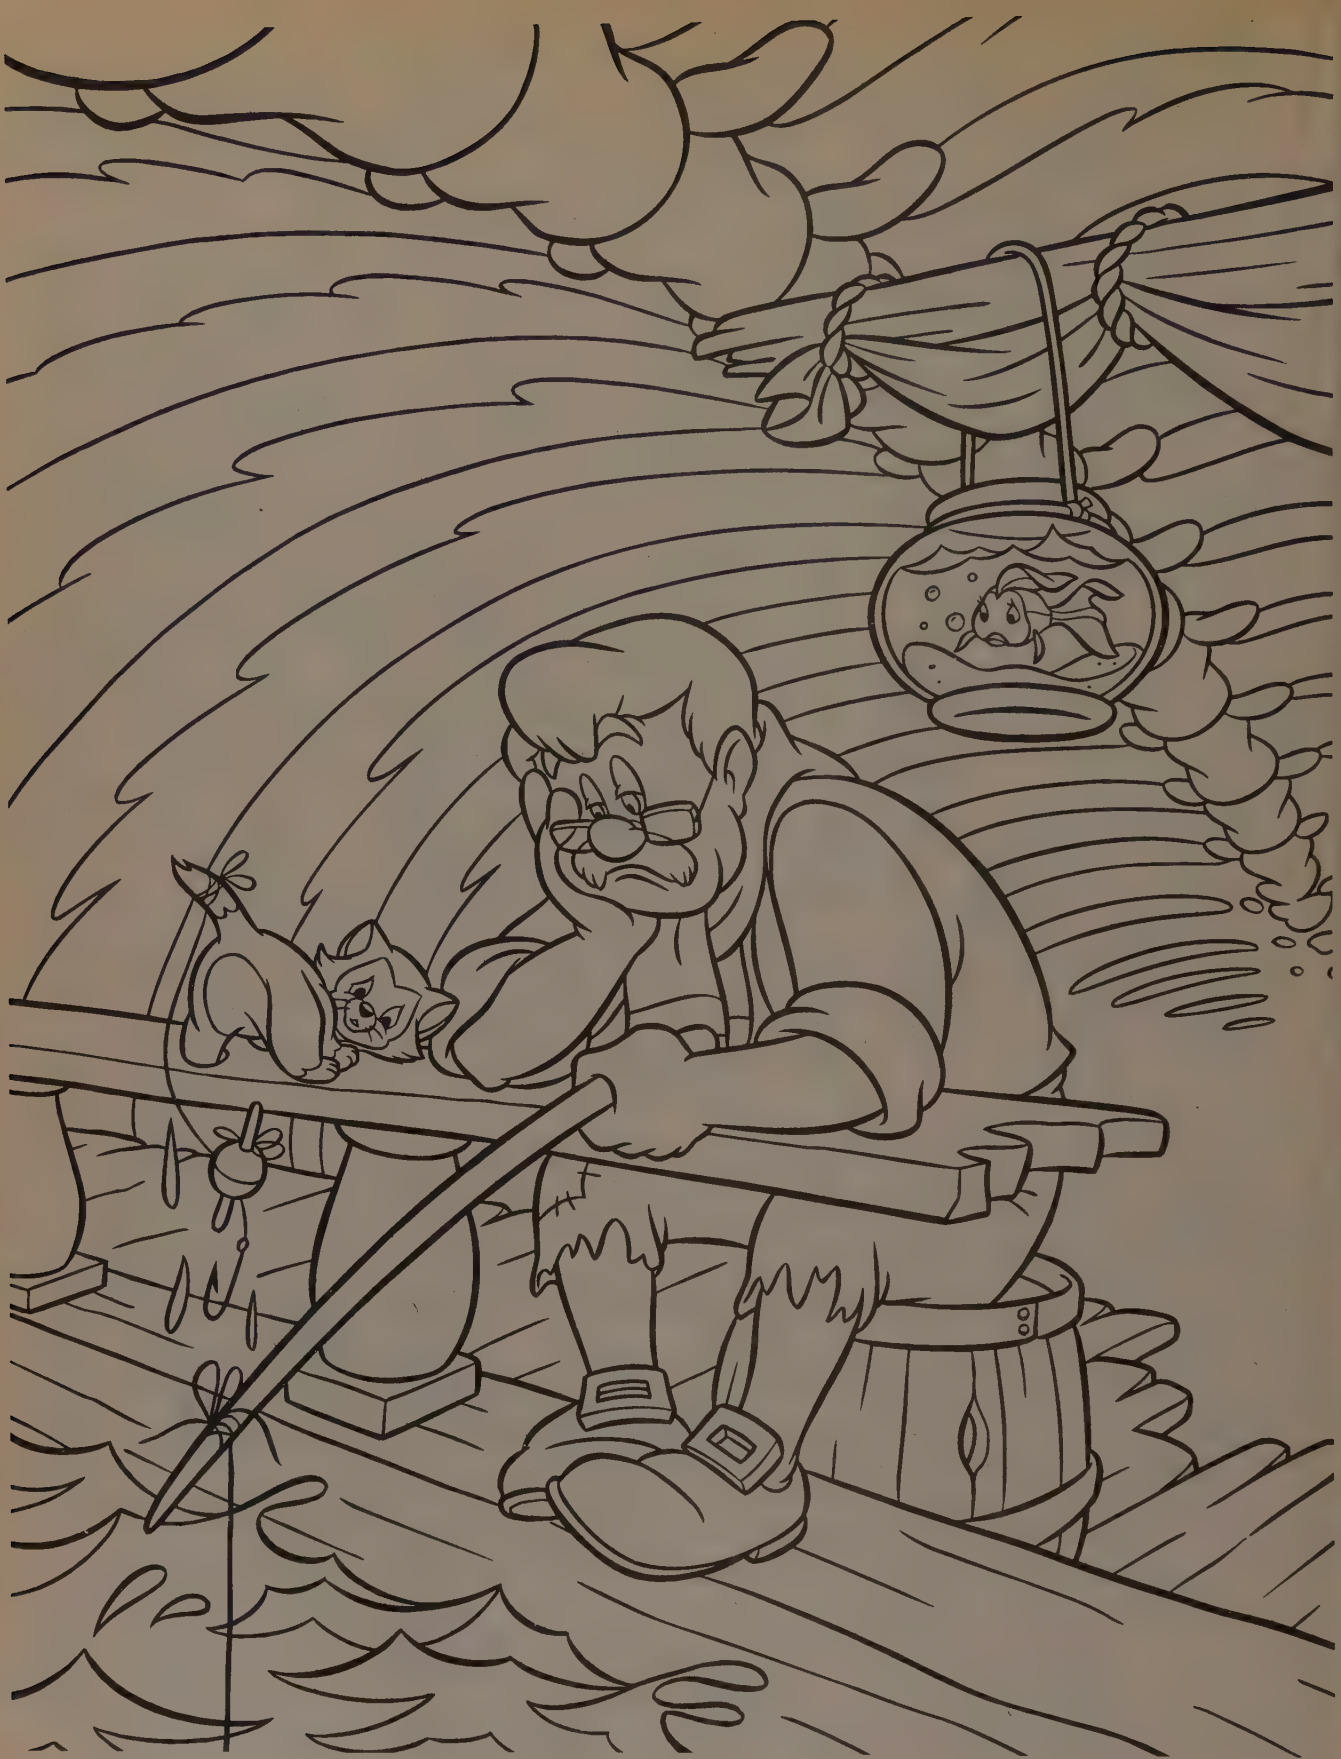

They were looking for Monstro the whale.

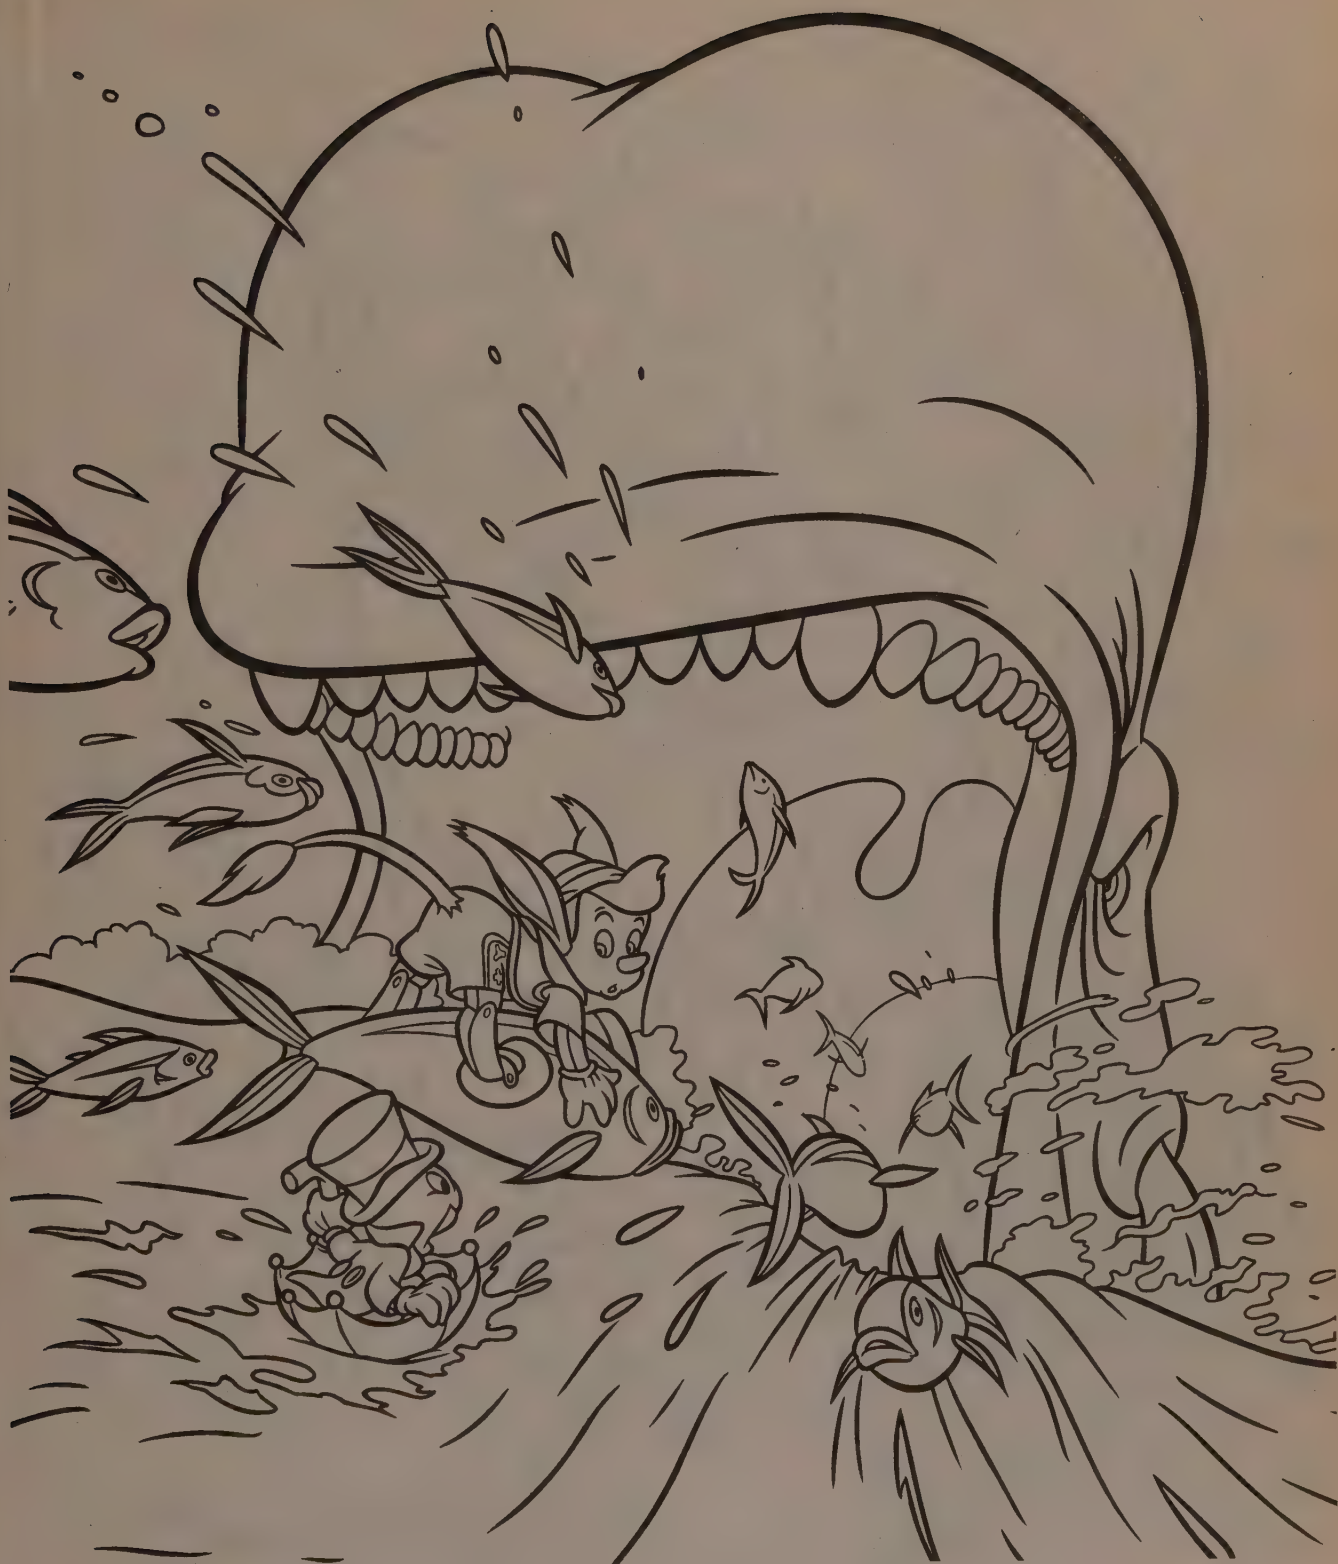

Pinocchio would not give up!

Ahead of them loomed the huge whale!

Deep inside that whale sat poor Geppetto, with Figaro and Cleo.

Pinocchio and Jiminy were swallowed by Monstro!

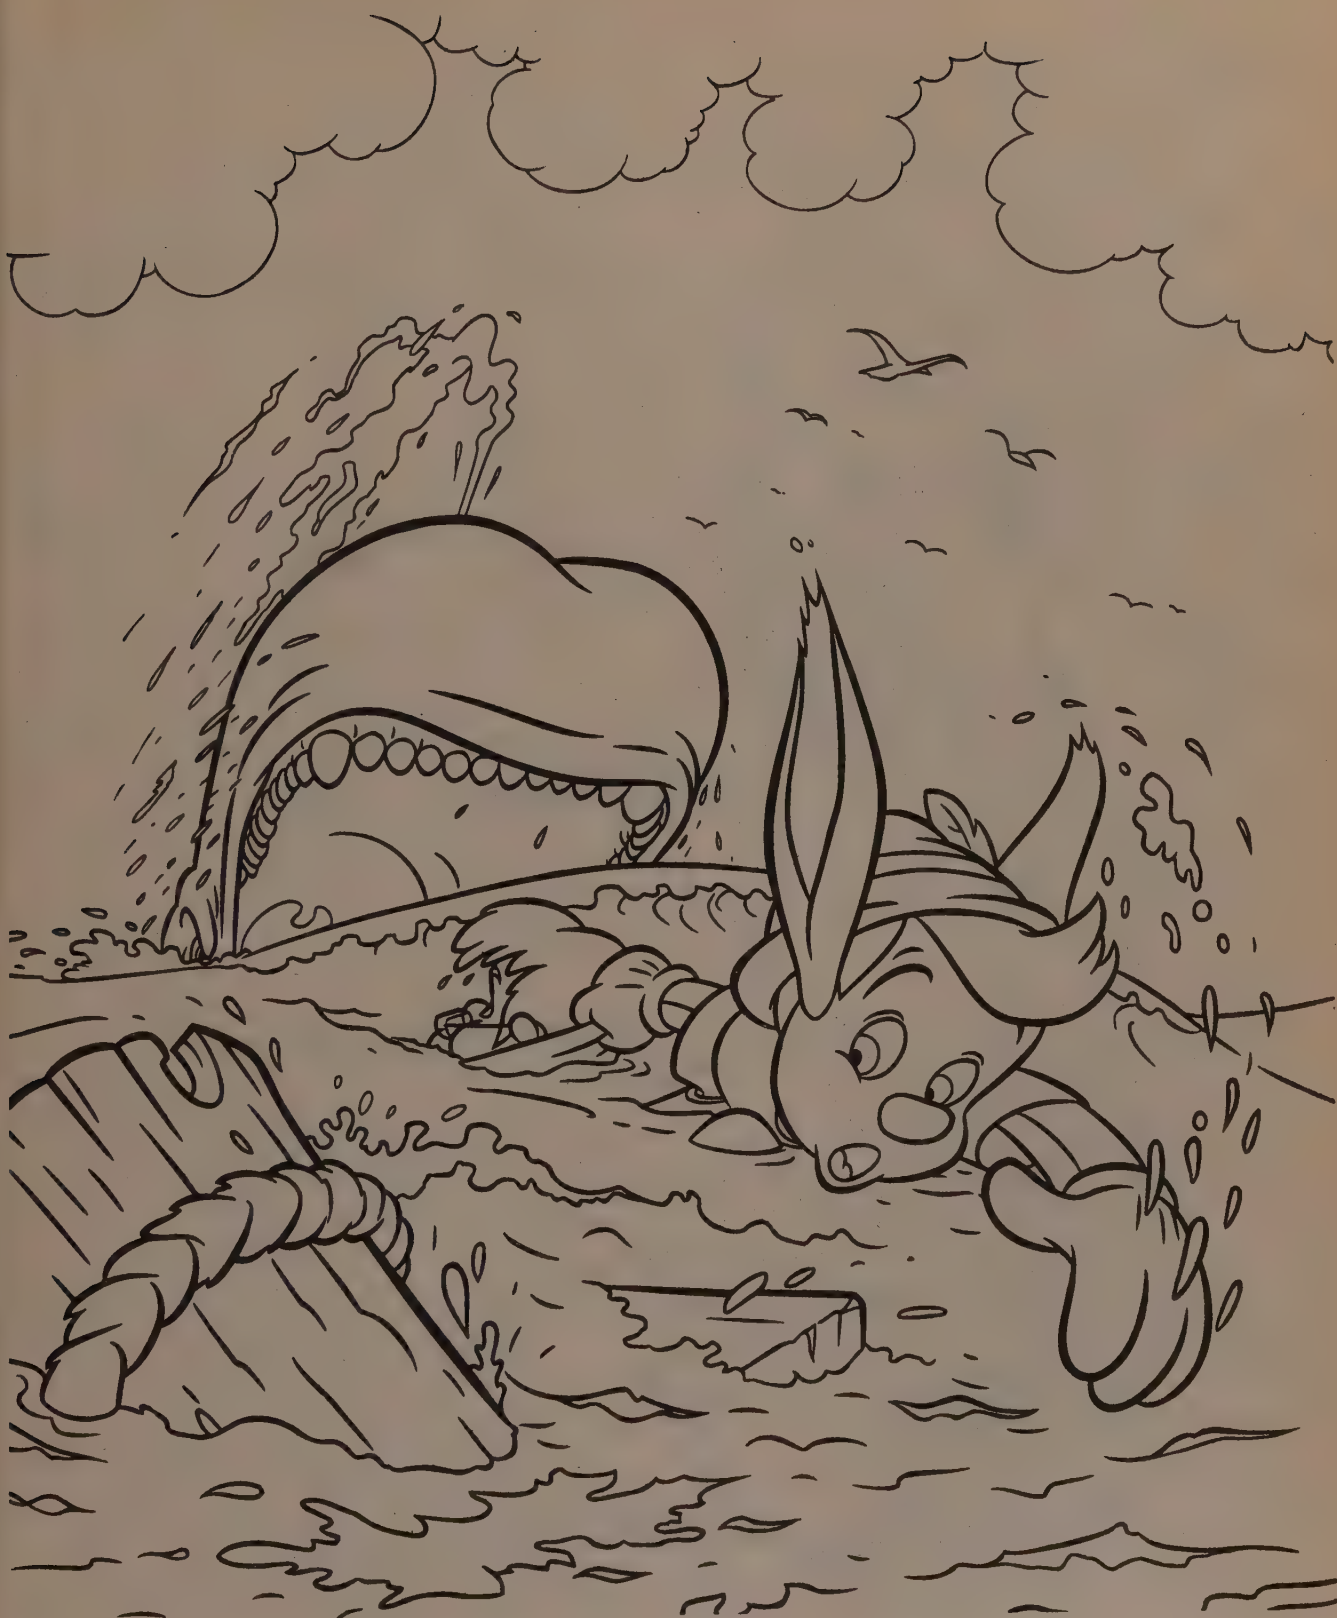

Oh, how happy Geppetto was to see his dear boy again!

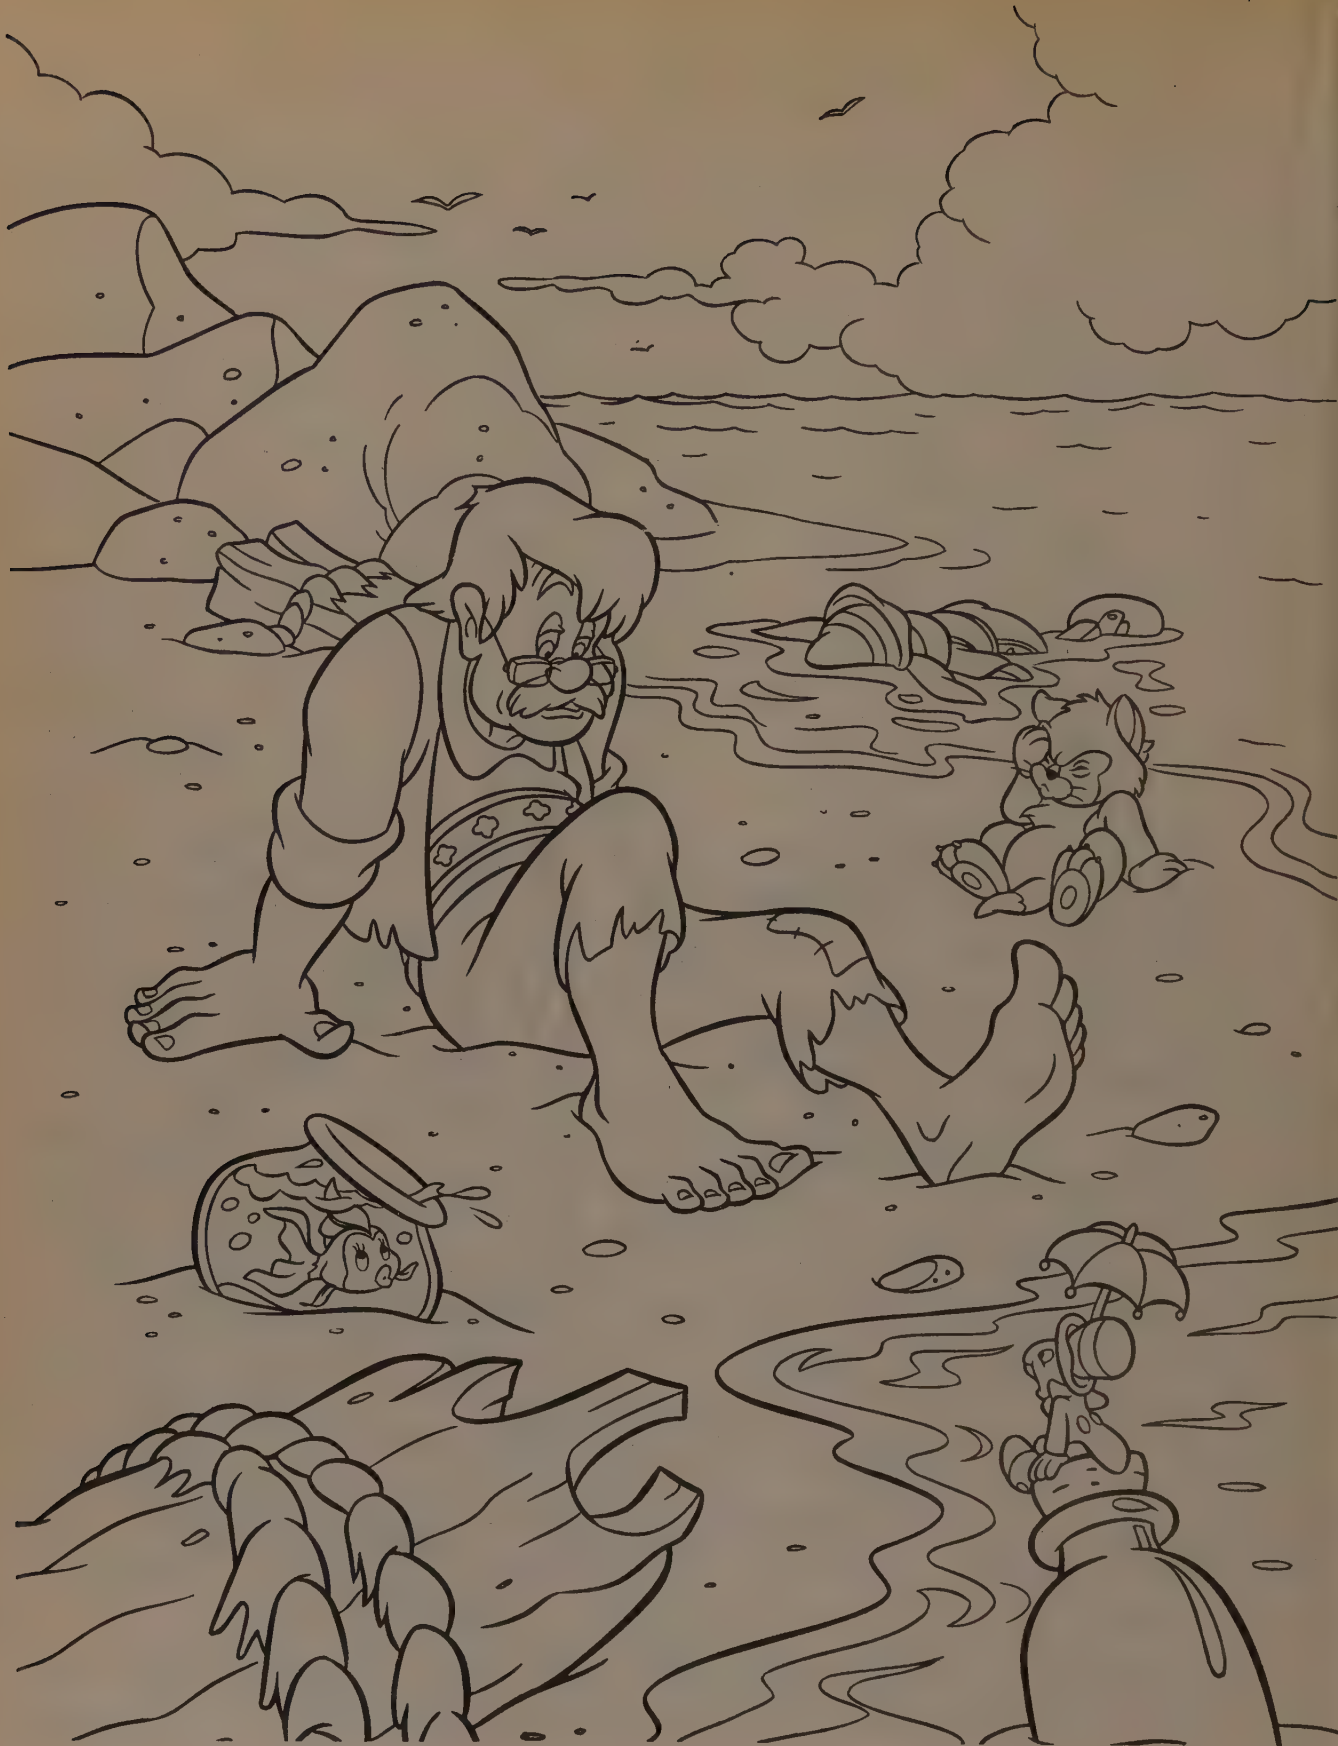

Pinocchio had an idea! They would build a fire.
The smoke would make the whale sneeze!

Monstro sneezed!—and blew them all out on their little raft!

Pinocchio rescued his father.
He swam and pulled him to shore.

Everyone made it to shore alive—except for Pinocchio.

Geppetto took his boy home. He wept.
Then a blue light sparkled all around Pinocchio.

Pinocchio became a real boy!
And what a good boy he was, too!

"This calls for a celebration!" said Geppetto.

And, what happened to Jiminy?

Why, he got an official gold badge!
